4. Implications

- In order to enhance the policy utilization of indicators, the 2019~2020 4th Consumer Markets Evaluation Indicators introduced consumer-orientation of legislation indicator and conducts analysis with the secondary data, such as consumer redress data in Korea Consumer Agency.

- Through this, 5 consumer-orientation warning markets and 4 markets (fishery products, large household appliances, household chemicals products, personal care products) which need to be improved were derived.
- Further, the foundation for stable and periodic production of Consumer Markets Evaluation Indicators should be established in future research.
- It is also required to increase the number of samples for individual markets and to conduct further in-depth consumer market study to derive detailed policy measures that require consumer-oriented improvement in individual market.
